WORCESTERSHIRE

A Natural
Remedy

Time was when disease was thought to be due to the direct influence of evil spirits, and exorcism and magic were invoked to cast it out.

Science has taught us wisdom. The evil spirits exist still. We call them "Disease Germs," and they also must be cast out. Once lodged in the stomach or intestines, fever with its hallucinations, or biliousness with its aches and pains, is the result.

ENO'S
FRUIT SALT

is the approved remedy for driving out disease germs. Its action is quick and thorough. It clears the intestines, rouses the torpid liver to new life, stimulates the mucous membrane to a healthy action, and cleanses and invigorates the whole digestive tract.

It may be safely taken at any time by young or old.

It is very effective in the early stage of Diarrhoea by removing the irritating cause.

Be prepared for emergencies by always keeping a bottle in the house.

Prepared only by

BAD WORDS.

DRAMATIC LANGUAGE OF SIR ARTHUR PINERO.

Our Verbal Poverty.

Once more the critics are accusing Sir Arthur Pinero of using bad language. Not language of the colloquial naughtiness Mr.
Shaw allowed himself on a notorious occasion. The very reverse of that. Fine language, stilted language, what some people in sublime unconsciousness of what makes for literature call literary language.

The private detective in "The Big Dum" says: "I'll pump the girl," then correcting himself, adds: "I'll interrogate the assistant." One critic thereupon suggests that Sir Arthur must be having a quiet laugh at himself. "He is always interrogating the assistants."

I have sometimes wondered whether it is this habit of Sir Arthur's which has so corrected him to actors. The commoner mistake is that they love a Pinero play because it is "well made," and let them see and know exactly how the machinery works. This is indeed, must be couched in words. We need not leave the language to us, as though it were a matter of life or death for the neatly egghead wheels. Most actors love a resounding phrase. It gives them more pleasure to say "I presume" than to say "I suppose," or "I think," and Sir Arthur Pinero has always been a "presu-ming" writer of dialogue. His characters are the only true Johnsonians of our time.

A kindly judge will not sneer. He will like the motive into account. Of course it is possible to argue that Sir Arthur's motive is to make his characters really better, refined men and women who cannot talk as the vulgar herd. By similar methods Wordsworth sought to dignify his position on a immortal lines?

If the effort in neither case is quite successful, we can at least honour the motive. To be refined, and elegant, and gentle, is a noble undertaking, and most of a few hundred words cannot talk as the vulgar herd. By similar methods Words-

HOW ACTRESSES KEEP THEIR GOOD LOOKS.

Many ladies envy their sisters of the theatrical profession, and wonder how it is that they retain the girlish freshness of complexion, the beaming eyes, and the vivacity of manner which most women lose soon after marriage if not before.

The secret is simple. It is that actresses take plenty of exercise, are careful as to diet, and pay due attention to the commonsense laws of health. "That all women now, at certain times, a tonic medicine to build up the nerves and to assist nature in her work, every actress recognises, and that is the reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are so popular among them."

Mrs. Dorothy Ward, for example, who first won fame in "The Dairymaids," and is now regarded as one of the best "principal boys" in pantomime on the English stage, says: "I recognise how valuable Dr.
Williams' Pink Pills have been in helping me to be well and keep well. What is good for the singer is good for the audience, that is why I willingly give public praise to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.
It is fully due to them."

All leading medicine dealers throughout the world sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they are also obtainable, one bottle for $1.50 & bottles for $3/- post free, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 25, Seachuen Road, Shanghai.

and—"hardy animals," as the hop farmers style them—will be missing, there does not seem likely to be a serious dearth of pickers for the crop. Increased help will be found in the localities concerned, and many voluntary pickers are lending their assistance.

THE SPIRIT OF OUR RACE.

The spirit of our race prevailed In great Queen Bess's mighty reign; When Drake the ancient highway sailed To meet the galleons of Spain; When Nelson rode to Trafalgar
The fount of valour was renewed; Exulting guns proclaimed afar
The spirit of the island-breed!

Sleep well in your eternal bed, Heroes of olden splendour, sleep!
Your heirs the ways of battle tread, And they the pride of England keep!
Your spirit yet have handed down,
The power no enemy could kill!
And not to slumber, the dead's renown Finely your sons display it still!

So may we face the centuries Of Drake and Nelson's deathless fame, And dare beneath the blood-red skies To say their spirit lives the same!
Through council, trumpet, shell and shot, Going where the hosts have gone, Dead captains are it, unforgotten, The spirit that they handed on!

TWELVE MILLION MEN.

Russia's Huge Reserves.

Mr. Cripps, the French ex-Minister, on his return to Bukharest from Petrograd, says the "Daily Telegraph" of Sept.
8th, declares in an interview that Russia is in an excellent state and has prodigious resources. By her advance into Russia, Germany has risked great dangers, especially those involved in the arrival of winter. Notwithstanding the considerable losses of the Russian army, Germany knows that Russia has still several million of admirable soldiers, whose arrival is now.

If Russia has munitions, Germany would be crushed, because the Russian soldiers are incomparably superior to those of the enemy. Mr. Cripps declares that Russia will have the necessary munitions. She is a slow organizer on account of the bureaucratic system, which, however, will soon disappear, and delay will be obviated because throughout Russian territory the production of munitions is in course of development, and soon will be so accelerated as to more than balance the daily loss. The French statesman added that the industries of the Allies must give assistance to the Russian efforts.

Mr. Cripps denies the rumour of any separate peace being made by Russia.
The Tsar desired to him that Russia will fight until she has achieved a definite victory. The Russian harvest is excellent, and there is no agitation except that of patriotism, inspired by the desire of all to participate in the interests of the country and to bring about a liberal organisation. Mr. Cripps also gave the lie to another German calumny, and said that the Staffs of the Allies were in perfect agreement. He said he had full confidence in a Russian victory.

SINGING SONGS TO SOLDIERS.

MISS ADA REEVE RELATES HER EXPERIENCES.

One day a bluejacket slipped and fell outside my garden gate and cut his head very badly. I rendered first aid, but the poor fellow had a narrow escape from bleeding to death. When he was well again he called on me to express his gratitude for the slight service I had rendered, and this is what he said: "I am awfully obliged to you, Miss Reeve, for what you have done for our commander.
You know, his luck has been out lately.
The other day he lost five of us in a drowning accident, and I'm glad you saved him from another stroke of bad luck. You've done him a real good turn."

It is Miss Ada Reeve who tells this delightful story of the famed modesty and thoughtfulness for his superior officer of the British sailor. Her cliff home in the Isle of Wight overlooks the blue waters of the Solent, and she has been busy lately singing songs to soldiers and sailors in the South of England. She visited the wounded at Netley Hospital, and also a private residence at Hythe, owned by an American lady, who has given up all the rooms in her house to the wounded Tommies, and herself sleeps in the cellar.

BACK TO THE STAGE.
The famous comedienne has now returned to the London stage and is singing now songs at the Victoria Palace with all her wonderful charm.

"I have had the privilege of meeting and singing to lots of our wounded boys from the front in the last few weeks," said Miss Reeve, in an interview with a "Daily News" representative, "and the one outstanding impression I brought away with me is the unquenchable spirit of optimism and cheerfulness that pervades all ranks without one single exception. I have sung to them for hours together, and although I have felt like crying myself it was only their splendid spirit that buoyed me up. The poor maimed fellows at Netley wined their crutches at me and I always came away with that feeling that I had not done enough for them."

"I have shelved some of my old songs on account of the change in the public taste. The songs our soldiers and sailors love best are not the old comical songs the deeply sentimental melodies that tell of the human touch they want."

A POPULAR SONG.
"I think that is the common experience of all our public singers to-day, a few lines of one of the songs the Tommies like best, run:—

"Each night I pray that you will come safely home again,
Each day I smile and try to hide my fear.

No matter what this bad old world might come to,
I would not care if you were with me, dear."

"The other day I heard a sailor give a wonderfully clever imitation of Mr. Wil-kie Bard in The Night Watchman. He was terribly enthusiastic about the song, and had managed, between docks of a torpedo-boat, to paint his own scenery, which he brought along with him at the concert. The war has brought about a great revival of Irish and Scotch songs, and there is hardly a performance in the country without songs of this kind." One day recently Miss Reeve attended a performance of On Trial at the Lyric, and she was hailed by a loud "c-o-o-e" from a wounded Australian, who was present at one of her last performances in Melbourne twelve months ago, just after the war broke. He insisted on a personal interview, and he said Miss Reeve had a pleasant chat in the stalls.

One of Miss Reeve's most popular songs with the soldiers is "Don't forget the girl behind," which she sings every night on the stage, and which is finding its way to the home camp and to the military concerts in France. Miss Reeve herself has been conspicuous for some months after a serious illness that overtook her on the homeward voyage from Australia, but she is contemplating a return to one of the West End theatres.

"SQUEERS" AND "SMILE."

Where Dickens Found Originals of Two Characters.

There has come into the possession of Messrs. Macgill Brothers, the antiquarian book-reliars, of 100, Strand, a letter written by Charles Dickens about the characters in Nicholas Nickleby. Addressed to Mrs.
S. C. Hall, the writer on Irish Life, the letter describes incidents in that Dickens novel which actually came across his path in those Yorkshire schoolmasters' houses in the course of a visit to that county, under an assumed name, to see his local colour.

The letter, which is written from Doughty-street, and dated December 2, 1836, is preserved as to the war in The Times.
I am exceedingly obliged to you for your kind note, and the interesting anecdote which you tell so well. I have laid it by in the MS. of the first number of Nickleby, and shall keep it there in confirmation of the truth of my little picture.
I depend upon it that the casualness of those Yorkshire schoolmasters' houses easily be exaggerated and that I have kept down the strong truth and thrown as much comically over it as I could, rather than disgust and weary the reader with its realism. The identical anecdotal you speak of, I have carefully enough. His name is Shaw; the action was tried (I believe) eight or ten years since, and if I am not much mistaken another action was brought against him by the parent of a miserable child, a cancer in whose head he opened with an ink penknife, and so caused his death. The country for miles around was covered, when I was there, with deep snow. There is an old church near the school, and the first grave stone I stumbled on that dreary winter afternoon was placed above the grave of a boy, eighteen long years old, who had died suddenly. The inscription said: I suppose, his heart, broke—the camel falls down. "suddenly," when they heap the last load upon his back—died at that wretched place. I think his ghost put Smoke into my head, upon the spot.
I went down in an assumed name, taking a plausible letter to an old Yorkshire

WAR'S TRAGIC DISILLUSION

The true patriot, the man that really hates war, is the man making war. And he is wise with the wisdom of disillusionment. So we learn from the Nation, (London) which cites in proof of the statement letters "from the more intellectual and sensitive types of German officers and soldiers which Mr. Romain Rolland has collected in a Swiss journal." To one of these letters a German soldier says to a Swiss professor: "Convinced as we may be of the need of the need to conquer, enthusiasm for the war does not exist for us." And the soldier adds: "We do our duty, but I can not tell you the suffering we endure." Again, a lieutenant of the Landwehr, since killed in 'champane', writes lamenting the war that goes on endlessly "swallowing up men, treasure, happiness." The feeling is the same with the French, he asserts, and continues: "Always the same picture: we are both doing the same, we are suffering the same, we are the same. And is precisely why we are such bitter enemies." The Nation calls attention to the fact that as the second year of the war opened with no prospect of an approaching end, we begin to realize in this "first war of nations, that is, of organized communities, able to devote all their wealth and knowledge to the science of war," what "unheard-of destructions" they can develop. We should seek, therefore, to make it the last war of the nations, "for two such blows can never be struck without bringing the house to the ground." We read then: "It can not be ended to-morrow; but neither, we think, can it drag out into a seven or even a three-years' war. Even a two-years' campaign implies that the national armies must return to deeply impoverished communities; in which religion, social relationships, the means and distribution of wealth, the laws, habits, interior organizations of the peoples, will have sustained devastating changes. In what mood will they return? Not, it countless witnesses be true, rejoicing in the pomp and triumphs of war. Pomp there is none; triumph, in the sense of 'apoll or acclamations of wealth and dignity, will be equally lacking, for we have all been spoiling one another. These armies are not formed merely of the military castes. They are the peoples, suffering with and for those they have left at home."

Referring to the letters of the German soldiers above quoted, the Nation says that "they utter the lament of youths whom their elders have laid on the altar of sacrifice," and it lays the blame of the war on the shoulders of "middle-aged Europe." Now, the greater tragedy is, according to this journal, that the German officers and men who write these despairing letters are "the exponents of ideas which they realize will have no evil issue for them as for us, and it adds that such experiences exhibit the moral force of mankind at issue with its physical energies or powerless to assert itself against the directing will. From that contradiction either a worse hell will befall Europe, or she must attain the conception of a new moral world, and arrange a political constitution to suit it.

"The conflict, therefore, can only be useless and irrational if it results in the victory of militant Teutonism. It can not really end in a 'draw' for there is no stalemate in ideas. The really fatal issue would be that 'science' should be able to wreck civilisation, which, being the combination of the religious, artistic, industrial activities of man, depends on a variety of gifts contributed by all the peoples, great and small, not on the dominance of one, and that the least original, though the best organized, of all. Here lies the true battle. The German idea of civilisation is essentially that of its great modern historian Mommsen, who insisted that it demanded the 'suppression of races less capable of, or less advanced in, culture by nations of higher standing.' This is a clear proclamation of an age of perpetual wars. It justifies the destruction of the weaker or more stagnant nations by the stronger or more rapidly developing ones. It would have made it right for the England of 1860 to crush the Germany of that period: just as it is the excuse of the proud, self-sufficient German 'kultur' of today in regarding the backward, but infinitely promising, Slav power as its mortal enemy. Such a theory makes each nation the judge of its own right to possess the earth, or rather to dispossess the 'unfit'."

This megalomania is not "exclusively German," the Nation observes, but "the sin of materialism, the heresy of an Imperial age, forgetting its Christianity, and taking a leap back to Roman Caesarism." The true word for European statesmanship is "association," as each nation is "the servant of all," and the fact is impressed upon us that "there is no master nation" and "no one way to culture."

"It is for this reason," says the journal quoted, that we urge with all our force that, if we abandon our British idealism, all is lost for Europe and ourselves. Why should we? The world is going our way, not Germany's; it wants not more force but more liberty, and it will want more and more of it after the war. Wars do not exist for war's sake, they exist for peace; and peace itself rests on some stable settlement of national wills, in accordance with the new ideas and the changing political habits of mankind. Therefore, even if Germany were to win this war—which she can not—she would be beaten in the end by the fact that her will was out of harmony with the growing world-will and the coming world-order. And, on the other hand, the British and French and Russian and Italian boys who are fighting and dying in the trenches are not mere nationalists; they are soldiers of humanity, if humanity, as we of modern Europe understand it, is to have any chance at all. 'What would happen to the armies,' writes a woman correspondent, 'if a million women were to rush in between them? Well, the armies would at least be reminded that half the world expects to live out its life on far other conditions than in the year of terrors that is to come.' Exhaustion will not in itself produce this change, for all the world will not be exhausted, nor the rivalries of young, ambitious nationalities in Eastern Europe and of the empires that patronise them. It is through its faith that the world can attain salvation, not through its knowledge, which is the knowledge of death and evil; or through its power, which will in a few months give place to the weakness of a little child."

Referring to the letters of the German soldiers above quoted, the Nation says that "they utter the lament of youths whom their elders have laid on the altar of sacrifice," and it lays the blame of the war on the shoulders of "middle-aged Europe." Now, the greater tragedy is, according to this journal, that the German officers and men who write these despairing letters are "the exponents of ideas which they realize will have no evil issue for them as for us, and it adds that such ex-

Sir Paul Chater was fined $5 at the Police Court this afternoon for allowing his dog to be out without a muzzle.

A case against Mr. Darby for allowing his motor car to be driven without a light was dismissed at the Police Court today.

The silk dispatched from Hongkong per the s.s. "Tenyo Maru" on the 14th September was delivered in New York the 10th instant.

Found at the Kowloon Railway Station with six tools of opium, a Chinese was fined $250 by Mr. Hazland this morning for exporting the drug.

The trial of the Captain of the N.D.L. Frossen, for violation of Dutch neutrality, will take place on November 23, at Scheep. The chief officer, Liebeck, stands charged with him.

Mr. Kent, of 8 Queen's Gardens, reports the theft yesterday of four silver vases, four silver rose bowls, a silver cigarette case and two clocks, of the total value of $120.

A Chinese, who was found on the roof of a house with three zinc pipes, which he said he was "repairing," was sentenced by Mr. Hazland this morning to two months' hard labour and four hours' stocks.

Mr. W. L. Shenton, of Messrs. Deacon, Looker, Deacon, and Harston, on behalf of the Societe des Cinemas, Haiphong and Messrs. Law & Sons and another for $88, in the Summary Court. Mr. Ross, for the defence, would not, said Mr. Shenton, admit the facts and so he would probably have to send a commissioner to Haiphong.

His Lordship said everyone knew the facts, but Mr. Ross said he did not know yet he refused to admit them (laughter). His Lordship remarked that he did not know why Mr. Shenton wanted a commissioner to go so far when the amount was only $88. Plaintiffs had better bring their witnesses here. His Lordship asked the parties to go into chambers.

The Acting British Consul at Wuchow, reporting on the trade of that port in 1914, remarks that the most important exports in the trade returns, the 321 tons exported last year being valued at $26,874. Antimony does not appear largely in the returns, but there are many valuable mines in the Province of Kwangsi, and most of the trade is in German hands. Shipments are not made via Wuchow, but from a small river port called Su Tong, in the Tien Pak district of Kwangtung, east of Kwangchow. It is brought by junk to Canton and Hongkong. Since the outbreak of the war the Chinese have been taking more interest in their antimony mines and a company has been formed for exploiting them. The difficulties of transport are the great hindrance to the proper development of the mines of the Province. Coal is also found in large quantities, but it is little worked and the methods are primitive. The wants of the Province are supplied by Japan.

ORIGINE AGAINST AN INDIAN.

Singh, an Indian lance-sergeant in the Hongkong Police, was charged this afternoon before Mr. Lindell with the theft of twenty cents' worth of onions, and also with misconduct.

Mr. F. C. Jenkin, instructed by Mr. J. E. Gardiner, represented the defendant, and pleaded not guilty. Inspector Watt said defendant was on duty at a wharf in the early morning and was seen by collector, sent to take away vegetables from the "Tin Shan" and put into a bundle of vegetables and walk away with it. A detective would say that he saw defendant take fruit from a basket. Mr. Jenkin mentioned that defendant had been 25 years in Government Service. Evidence was then given. The case was adjourned.

Hongkong, 21st Oct. 1915.

Middle-aged people will hear with regret of the death of Max Adler, who 20 or 40 years ago delighted countless readers by his quaint humour and rivalled Alexander's and Mark Twain's in the affections of two continents. His name was Charles Haber Clark, and he was born in Maryland in 1841. He was a journalist all his life, and in his later days, when he was well along in years, he edited a trade paper, The New York and New Jersey Herald, which was one of the most popular of its kind in the United States.

He was a member of the Knickerbocker Club, and his last known books in Europe were his last known books in Europe.

They are members of the Imperial Merchant Service Guild and the following records of their membership are taken from the Books of the Guild:—

THE MISSING "PARTNER."

Government Contractors As Defendants.

Chan Cheung, trading as the Man Tan firm, 50 Main Street, Shaanwan, sued the Sang Lee firm, 69 Des Voeux Road, contractors, for a sum of $776.10, balance due from defendants for stones sold and delivered.

Mr. F. X. D'Almada, for plaintiffs, said he was at a loss to understand what the defence could be. The claim was practically admitted a week ago.

Mr. Denny denied that he admitted the debt. The defence was that the man signing as the plaintiff was not the plaintiff at all, but a man "put up" to make the claim.

Mr. D'Almada asked leave to call evidence proving plaintiff was Man Tan.

Mr. Denny: I shall have to prove it.

Plaintiff produced his chop under which only could money be received.

Mr. Denny said plaintiff was a foreman. The amount was admitted but the real owner had run away owing a lot of money. That man had left instructions that no amount above $50 in bank notes was to be paid to any person by the man to whom he had entrusted his chop.

A managing partner of the defendant firm, Government contractors, for Ty Tam Tak, said a contract was made with the Man Tan firm and the price arranged with Li Sing Chi, the man who had absconded. Witness said he had not seen plaintiff before. Four small payments to the Man Tan firm were paid for the purpose of providing rice and paying coolies wages.

The hearing was adjourned.
